Dear Bruce,

I believe I could be an asset to the LANDIS-II development team because I am a great collaborator, I have a drive for excellence, and I have the ability to write high quality code.

Over the past few years I have worked on everything from high performance connections between applications on local networks, to applications that can deliver thousands of data points in an efficient and meaningful way. In all of my previous development positions my responsibilities have included research, design, coding, testing, and documentation. I am familiar with working throughout the whole software life cycle.

I have professional experience with many of the requirements for this position including C#, C# IDEs, code testing, and GitHub. It has been about a year since I last worked on a C# project but I believe I can pick it back up quickly. I also have professional experience with Java which has similar language constructs, so I would just need to immerse myself in the C# ecosystem again.

Other than my strong technical skills, I also have the ability to work very well in a team environment. I enjoy collaborating with coworkers to solve problems, as well as just engaging in conversations to get to know my team better. I am certain I can bring the team many benefits with my experience and personality.

Thank you for your time and consideration; I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Dakota Sanchez
